Crop Quality Internship

Now recruiting for 2021

Wheat Marketing Center in Portland, Oregon is offering a paid summer internship to help analyze the annual wheat crop, July-September. This internship is beneficial for someone who is looking at a career in agriculture, food science and/or research and development. The successful applicant can expect to gain experience in all aspects of the multifaceted wheat crop quality project that analyzes the PNW wheat crop each year, including preparation and testing of wheat quality.

Ideal candidates should be enrolled in a science, food science, or agriculture program, plus be at a college junior level, higher undergraduate, or graduate student. Previous laboratory experience preferred but not required.
