Umbrella Falls - One month left

Posted: 12 Jul 2012 07:31 AM PDT

Saturday afternoon I went in to town to pick up my dress that was supposed to be done Friday but it was not done.

Sunday I went with Susan to the AIC church with the sign language interpreted service as it was her last Sunday. At the deaf service afterwards I was invited to a special Deaf meeting next Saturday. I did not quite follow what it was about so I will find out!

Sunday afternoon I went with a group to Umbrella Falls.

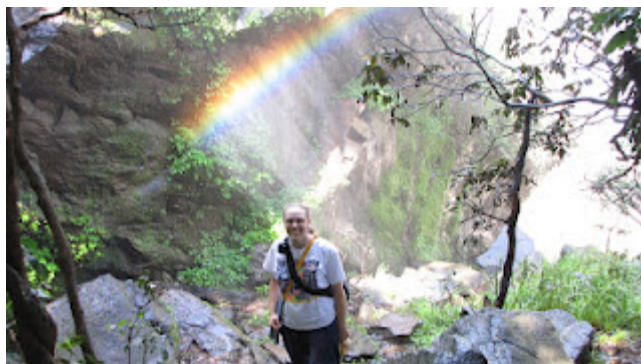

Nice lazy looking river

rocks we climbed down to get to the waterfalls

There are actually 3 water falls pretty close together and lots of rocks at the bottom so there is a substantial amount of mist as you near the bottom leading to... rainbows! I think it should be called Rainbow Falls.

I saw a double rainbow and a rainbow that was three quarters of a circle!

My favorite!

The main waterfall is over a 100ft high and very powerful.

If this was the USA they would have fences all around and you would never be able to get close.

The cave behind the waterfall

A wizened tree at the edge of the cave back of the waterfall
We are now down to less than one month left! I feel quite at home here. Not much to dislike about the 60-80 degree weather! However, I do miss all my people at home and it will be good to see them and get on to my last year of school!!!
