2005 Corporate Woman of the Year

Joan Miller, Senior Vice President for Client Development and Marketing for the Industrial Client Group of CH2M HILL

Joan Miller is a phenomenal combination of professional accomplishment, corporate leadership and champion for other women in the workplace.

During her 25-year career with CH2M HILL—a global leader in engineering, construction and operations

—Joan has worked in a wide variety of roles, including project management, business development, and business management. Her numerous accomplishments include leading the proposal effort that won the nearly-completed Rocky Flats closure project and a key role in the smooth integration of the firm's largest acquisition, Lockwood Greene.

She is the Senior Vice President for Client Development and Marketing for CH2M HILL's Industrial Client Group, which accounts for approximately one-third of CH2M HILL's $3.5 billion business. In this role, Joan leads client development, strategic account programs and the integration of business development efforts across seven discrete business groups.

A person to whom others look as mentor and teacher, Joan has been a trailblazer in creating a more inclusive corporate culture—a matter near to her heart as the mother of three daughters. In 2003, Joan launched CH2M HILL's Women's Network, which actively supports the recruitment, development and retention of women. With 250 active members currently at CH2M HILL's headquarters in Denver, Women's Network chapters are being expanded to other major CH2M HILL offices nationwide.

Joan is a natural leader whose unassuming behavior hides a deeply ingrained passion for sustained value creation and business excellence, integrity and competitive performance—without losing sight of the work/life balance so valuable to business leaders today.

She is a graduate of Purdue University with a degree in Civil Engineering with highest honors. Joan, her husband and their daughters live in the Denver metro area.
