Barnard Mondal is a graduate student with an emphasis on hydraulics. He is also a Civil Engineering Ambassador because he enjoys serving his school. “We attempt to showcase the very best of our school and what makes our community special.”

CE Ambassadors are, themselves, the very best we have to offer, representing the School, its students, faculty and staff at a multitude of events. They also provide crucial information to prospective students and families while they are making one of the most important decisions of their lives.

Perhaps most important, CE ambassadors are volunteers, freely giving of their time and expertise to fellow students, families and alumni, while still meeting all their obligations as civil engineering students.

The most rewarding aspect for Barnard is getting to hear the stories of the alumni who come back to visit the same school that prepared them for their careers. “Speaking to alumni always affirms the excellence of the Lyles School in preparing people for careers in civil engineering,” he said.

Thank you for supporting our School and for inspiring students like Barnard.
